THE APPOINTMENT OF A CHINESI CONSUL IN HONGKONG.

In view of the appointment of a Chinese Consul in Hongkong we reprint the despatch written by Sir Richard MacDonnell to the Secretary ful as the mandarin at Kowloon, who, despite of State on this subject in 1869:---

Government House, Hongkong, May 12, 1869 My Lord, -I have the honour to acknowledge receipt of your Lordship's despatch, covering copy of a letter from the Foreign Office, transmitting a correspondence between Prince Kung and Sir R. Alcock, Her Majesty's Minis ter in China, from which it appears that Prince Kung had suggested the appointment by the Chinese Government of Officials to reside at Hougkong for the express purpose of attending to the collection of duties in the interest of the (Chinese) "Customs revenue.

2.—The Prince gives as a reason for this ex traordinary request that the supposed facilities afforded by the formation of the neighbouring coast for smuggling were such that "vessels were constantly evading the payment of dutie by taking a circuitous course, so as to avoid the barrier." i.e., in the Canton River. 3.—I need scarcely say that it might often be very convenient for a foreign country to save revenue protective service by levying its Customs duties on goods before they had even left the place of export. This would summarily remove any apprehension of smuggling those goods subsequently. French Customs' officers established at London Bridge, and levying duties on goods before they were clear of the Thames. ment which Prince Kung wished to form here. 4.—Obviously, it was not in Sir Rutherford possi.—I have, &c. Alcock's power to hold out any hope of such privilege being conceded, and it is greatly to be regretted that he did not confine himself to the statement of that indisputable fact. Prince Kung had very plainly given the reason why, in continuation, no doubt, of the Chinese Customs colony, he wished to place a staff of Chinese officials here: viz., to collect here on British territory Chinese duties which, by international

5.—I am not, however, surprised, owing to my former experience, that although no such right as that of appointing a Chinese Consul here had ever been claimed or conceded since the founds. tion of the colony, and though the question was a novel one, intimately affecting the interests of this place, Her Majesty's Minister should have made the suggestion to Prince Kung, and without the knowledge of this Government, and without affording me and my Conneil the op-6. —Nevertheless, I can easily understand that,

14.—It is quite clear, at least, that the question is not one of easy solution. It is ov no means a matter of course that China should appoint a Cousul here. It is, on the contact a question to be weighed and determined by the special and exceptional circumstances of this very peculiar place, its very peculiar inhabitants, and most peculiar geographical position. All these considerations, in the opinion of U. ise who are apparently well qualified to form a correct judgment, are decidedly opposed to the policy of hir B. Alcock, as being unfair even to the "ive residents, who, if they could be polled, would no doubt be found wholly averse to the suggestion; and, secondly, as dangerous to British int. sts. specially in times of trouble and impending hostilities—a consideration to which recent intelligence from Peking gives unusualimport uce. 15.—I am also not aware what function such Consul would exercise. Perhaps Sir R. Alcock contemplates limiting the intercourse of the Governor here with the Chinese Empire to representations made through a sub-officie like the Consul instead of through the British Consul to the Viceroy; a humiliation, in the eyes of the Chinese, which seems more injurious than beneficial to British interests. 16.-Finally, I and my Council felt that, in this matter, and looking to the peculiar circumstances of this place and its population, it was a plain duty to consider simply whether the proposed appointment would or would not advance British interests, seeing that there is no right to claim the privilege, which had never been urged by the Chinese authorities, and that the necessity for a Chinese Consul had never been experienced by either the foreign or native dom munity.

17.- I can only conceive such an officer being useful in one way, viz., to save the delay of reference to Cauton, by at once backing warrants for the arrest of criminals, or other parties amenable to British law, who might have escaped to, or be larking on, the mainland, Even in that respect a Consul would not be half so usethe views of Sir Rutherford on the subject, is, ex necessitate rei, in almost dails correspondence with the Hongkong police.

18 .- Altogether neither I nor my executive nor the representatives of the commercial and general interests of Hongkong in the Legislative Council, are able to see in what manner the legitimate interests of either Great Britzin or China are to be benefited by adopting this most unnecessary and uncalled for anggestion of Sir R. Alcock. We believe that such a creatica of an imperium in imperio would produce alorm and dissatisfaction among Chinese residents here; and that, by unnecessarily pressing on the Chinese the adoption of such a measure, Her Majesty's Government would be taking the surest course to develop, during times of reace, the worst vices of Chinese rule in a population under British protestion ; and, on the other hand, in the event of approaching disturbances, or the dessation of friendly relations with Peking, we should be creating in our midst a dangerous centre for rebellion, plots, and hostile action. Therefore, at the request of my Council, I now espectfully submit the foregoing observations to your Lordship, hoping that whatever correct may be adopted in any other colony, the exceptional circumstances and position of Hungwong may at least exempt it from the inconvenience and risk which the residence there of a Chinese Consul would entail, and may lead to the andefinite adjournment of so very ill-timed a pro-

The Weeleyan missionaries have been allow ed to day to return to their homes in the nativ city, but are warned that they must hold themselves in readiness to flee again t a moment's notice. This is real hard lines, especially for the ladies and children amongst them who came through the dreadful experience of the Wusueh riot. To have another such horror hanging threatoning them, every sound suggesting it in the day time, and every dream at night, is enough to try nerves of steel. The present troubles seem to be spreading westward. By letters from Wanshien, a city in Szechnan, on the Xangtaze, half way between Ichang and Chungking, we learn that the people in alarm over an expected rising were taking shelter in the old forts on the hill tops. They

Sir John Gorst acquiesced in the motion for the production of the papers; but said that the time for a full expression of opinion by the Government had not arrived. The approval of the Secretary of State for India for the expedition to Manipur, he said, was not asked because it was regarded as of little importance. 'There was. nothing unusual in making an arrest at a durber as this had frequently been done, but, owing to the massacre of the Chief Commissioner and others, the affair would remain an obscure page of history. Sir John concluded by saying that criticisms thereon were both unjust and futile. Sir Richard Temple said that a durbar was not the kind of place at which an arrest was ad-
